Membership is open to licensed active physicians, retired physicians and residents willing to self-designate as a Public Health Physician. It is also open to non-physician Associate Members and Medical Students.

A Public Health Physician is dedicated to guiding a community, agency, health organization, medical office, or program in the pursuit of group or community health goals.

Mission of AAPHP

Promote the Public's Health

Represent Public Health Physicians

Educate the nation on the role and importance of the Public Health Physicians' knowledge and skills in practicing population medicine.

Foster communication, education, and scholarship in Public Health.

Objectives of AAPHP

Advocate for public health and preventive services.

Advocate on behalf of Public Health Physicians.

Serve as a forum for Public Health Physicians, and by doing so, strengthen the sense of "community" and facilitate exchange of ideas among geographically dispersed Public Health Physicians.

Provide and facilitate career enhancement support services for Public Health Physicians.

Serve as a voice of Public Health Physicians to the American Medical Association (AMA), sister public health organizations, news media, government and the general public.

Facilitate recruitment and retention of Public Health Physicians into the AMA.

Benefits of membership

The AAPHP Website is located at <http://www.aaphp.org>. It provides AAPHP news and information, available job information and valuable links to resources for public health physicians, AAPHP E-News is a monthly electronic newsletter that includes items of interest to public health physicians. Members are encouraged to submit news articles or other information to share.

Meetings: AAPHP holds two meetings per year which coincide with other national health groups (usually the AMA Annual meeting and the APHA Annual meeting).

AMA Representation: As a recognized specialty organization, AAPHP keeps public health on AMA's agenda.

AAPHP Bulletins are issued several times per year with minutes of meetings and reports.
